SCoD Re-branding >>>>>> deafscotland emerges.....

We plan to begin the actual changes with a soft launch in Deaf Awareness Week (around 14th May). It will take some months to get all the changes in place so please be patient with our transformation. It will not disrupt our activities.

The new image is intended to convey a modern, inclusive approach focussing on “connections” (people, membership and partnership), joined up working with other networks and explain what we do. This reflects our “Connect and Thrive” programme. We thank all of you that sent messages of support and do hope you can all get behind the changes. Our power as a group is far greater than as individual people or organisations.

The rebranding process will take several months. We will start soon with information, new email addresses, begin to change the website, alert people through our social media and change our stationery. We are gradually developing our marketing and media campaign with advice and will keep you as informed as we progress.

We are very excited about the change.

End of an era – Mandy Reid

Mandy, who was until last June, our Policy and Research Officer has now left SCoD. Mandy worked at SCoD for over 10 years and is leaving a significant impact behind her.

“I am sad to be going although I have known it was a possibility since last July. I have worked with some wonderful people over the years and have enjoyed the challenges that I met almost every day in my work. I can honestly say I loved my policy and research work on behalf of deaf people in Scotland. I wish SCoD and all its members all the best for the future as deafscotland and am sure I will bump into many of you again.”

Mental Health and Wellbeing for all people affected by deafness: Past, Present and Future

SCoD started to campaign for inclusive mental health services for people with a hearing loss in Scotland in 1927, the year the organisation was set up. Today it continues to campaign for mental health and wellbeing services and information to be fully inclusive for everyone, including people across the four pillars of deafness.

It is 10 years since SCoD published the research paper “Making the Case for Specialist Mental Health Services in Scotland”. The current paper shows the developments that have been put in place for people with a hearing loss in Scotland who need support to maintain good mental health and wellbeing. It also shows what still needs to be done. To read the paper, go to www.scod.org.uk/briefings/

Health conditions question in the 2021 Census

SCoD has been involved in the consultations on the 2021 Census questions, especially the health questions.

Before the last Census in 2011, SCoD had lobbied for the "harmonised" health question to be changed to include the 4 pillars of deafness and we were told that this could not be done for a number of reasons.

As the See Hear strategy has been in place for five years and one of its "asks" is that more accurate data is collected on the number of people with a hearing loss in Scotland and the level of their deafness, our ask has become a need as the Census is an accurate method of collecting data on people in Scotland and their health conditions.

To read the paper, go to www.scod.org.uk/briefings/

Other

We have a baseline survey on mental health nearly ready to circulate. We will appreciate support to complete it over May/June. This work is growing a wider, collaborative partnership at the moment which will help coordinate development.

Please let us know what you plan for deaf awareness week and beyond. It helps us to keep the calendar on the website up to date and help avoid clashes of activity.

Self-Management survey

Thank you to all of those who took part in our Self-Management survey! Please find the link to the report of the survey here.

SCoD Membership

We have started to engage with our members for 2019 and invoices are out. Please continue to work with us.

We have two categories of membership:

- Full members. These are the organisations that have a major interest in deaf issues, make up the National Council, have voting rights and can put forward nominations to the SCoD Board.
- Associate members
 - organisations. These are organisations who are interested in deaf issues but it is not their main work, cannot have voting rights, be full members or do not want the responsibility of full membership.
 - individuals. These are individuals, people who are deaf or have an interest in deafness and want to support our work.

We are revising our membership offer and fees this year. Fees are held at the same price this year and have not increased for more than five years. In the future we want to be clearer on the content of the membership offer.

We also want to recruit new members to support our work.

- On BSL language development
- Communication barriers and solutions
- General deaf awareness

Scotrail - Communications about travel between Aberdeen and Inverness.

The ScotRail Alliance has published details of the latest upgrade works to be carried out between Aberdeen and Inverness. I am therefore sending you details of these works so you can let stakeholders know as we are keen to keep customers informed of the impending works. During the period of these works, we encourage any customers requiring assistance to pre book their travel using our Assisted Travel booking service to enable us to ensure that expectations are met.

Full details of the Assisted Travel service are on our website <https://www.scotrail.co.uk/plan-your-journey/accessible-travel>

As part of the multi-million-pound upgrade, a 14-week line closure between Aberdeen and Dyce will be in place from 12 May 2018, to allow major improvement works to take place. Bus replacement services will be in operation to keep customers moving between Aberdeen and Dyce during the upgrade work. Further details will be published closer to the time and will be available on the ScotRail website.

Preparation work will take place over the Easter weekend on Sunday 1 April 2018, and May bank holiday weekend from Friday 4 May until Monday 7 May 2018. This will include de-vegetation and ground investigations along the route. The line will be closed during these preparation works and replacement buses will be used over both weekends to get customers where they need to be.

The Aberdeen-Inverness Improvement Project is a Scottish Government-funded upgrade of the railway between the two cities.

By the end of 2019 the project will deliver:

- Hourly service between Inverness-Elgin, providing 1,300 additional seats each day

- Introduction of half hourly all-day service between Aberdeen and Inverurie, providing 3,000 additional seats each day
- Majority of Aberdeen to Inverness services formed of high speed trains, providing 1,400 additional seats each day
- Additional Elgin – Aberdeen early morning and late evening services
- New through services between Inverurie – Montrose, reducing the need to interchange at Aberdeen
- More through services between Inverness and the central belt via Aberdeen
- Extended platforms at Inch to accommodate longer high-speed trains

The upgrade work beginning in spring 2018 will double the track between Aberdeen and Dyce. There is currently only a single track between Aberdeen and Dyce, which causes delays as only one train at a time can pass through. Further upgrade work will be carried out between Dyce and Inverurie in 2019.

ScotRail Alliance Infrastructure Director David Dickson said:

“The investment we are making to upgrade the line between Aberdeen and Inverness is all part of our plan to build the best railway Scotland has ever had. This is a massive project, which will ultimately transform services in the north of Scotland.

“The work between Aberdeen and Dyce will double the track, so that we can improve the reliability of service our customers receive.

“We know lengthy line closures are a real inconvenience for customers, and we will do everything we can to keep people moving during the upgrade work. We will publish further information for customers closer to the time.”

PRioRiTy II

PRioRiTy II is a research project that aims to identify the most important unanswered questions that we have about things that affect whether people stay involved in research trials. This is important because trial teams work out the number of participants they need for a trial to produce meaningful results. If lots of people drop-out of the trial early, then the trial results may become unreliable or unstable.

The project will start with a survey, which aims to collect information from people across the UK and Ireland who are, or have been, involved directly, in designing, running, analysing, or taking part and/or staying involved in randomised trials.

We would like to invite you to complete the survey to provide your opinions about what the most important question relating to trial retention are. The survey can be accessed here: <https://www.surveymonkey.co.uk/r/2GBVMHV>

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTIONS, MOTIONS AND DEBATES

The Scottish Parliament
Pàrlamaid na h-Alba

UK Government Scottish Affairs Committee

The future of working practices in Scotland Inquiry

Technological developments, new business models and changes in consumer behaviour are bringing about huge changes to the ways in which people work, and their relationships with their employers. Many businesses now meet their labour needs in different ways—such as through flexible contracts and digital platforms which rely on self-employed workers. This has created new opportunities in Scotland and across the UK, but there are concerns that it has also led to an increase in low paid and insecure employment and has shifted the relationship between many businesses and their labour force.

In recognition of the challenges arising from changes to business models and the ways in which people work, the Government commissioned Matthew Taylor, Chief Executive of the Royal Society of Arts, to consider how employment practices needed to adapt to keep pace with modern business models. Following publication of the Taylor review's report, Good work: the Taylor review of modern working practices, the Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy and Work and Pensions Committees considered its findings and produced a joint Report, A framework for modern employment, which looked in detail at the issues considered, and recommendations put forward, by the review. The Government has since published its own response to the Taylor review, which committed to implementing several of Matthew Taylor's recommendations, and launched consultations looking at how other recommendations could most effectively be taken forward.

This Report seeks to build on that work, and examines the particular needs of Scotland and how the devolution settlement affects the way in which the UK and Scottish Governments respond to these challenges; recognising that—while employment law is reserved to the UK Government—both the UK and Scottish Governments have powers which affect the availability and quality of employment opportunities in Scotland, as shown below.

Universal Credit: Disabled People
903738 Thelma Walker (Colne Valley) (Lab):

What assessment she has made of the effect of the roll-out of universal credit on the number of disabled people living in poverty.

The Minister for Disabled People, Health and Work (Sarah Newton)

I do not want to see anyone living in poverty, and no Conservative Member of Parliament wants people living in poverty. Disabled people are some of the biggest beneficiaries of universal credit, with around 1 million disabled households having on average around £110 a month more on universal credit than they would have had on the legacy benefits.

Thelma Walker

As disability charity Leonard Cheshire has pointed out, many disabled people do not have internet access, assistive technology or the necessary support to fill in the online form to apply for universal credit. Does the Minister agree that the application process needs to be more accessible, so that disabled people can easily apply for these benefits?

Sarah Newton

The hon. Lady raises a very important point about accessibility of the benefits system for everyone, which is something we all take very seriously. I am grateful for the support that the Leonard Cheshire foundation and a whole range of stakeholders give us in designing the process, to make sure that it is as accessible as possible.

Mr Simon Clarke (Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland) (Con)

Does the Minister agree that it is important that we are absolutely scrupulous in our presentation of the facts about universal credit? As the Secretary of State referred to earlier, I wrote to the UK Statistics Authority to query the shadow Secretary of State's claim that "40,000 children will wake up in poverty on Christmas Day because the Tories refuse to pause" the roll-out of universal credit. On Friday, Sir David Norgrove told me:

"It is clearly important that statements by a political party should be fully supported by the statistics and sources on which they rely. We do not believe"
