SCoD Re-branding >>>>>> deafscotland emerges.....

It's official! We are now called deafscotland. We had a mini launch during Deaf Awareness Week at our National Council meeting on Wednesday 16 May 2018. It will take some months to get all the changes in place so please be patient with our exciting transformation. It will not disrupt our activities.

Our new image above is intended to convey a modern, inclusive approach focussing on “connections” (people, membership and partnership), joined up working with other networks and explain what we do. Our slogan is ‘equality & integration through communication for all’. This reflects our beneficial “Connect and Thrive” programme. We thank all of you that sent messages of support and do hope you can all get behind the changes. Our power as a group is far greater than as individual people or organisations.

The rebranding process will take several months. We have started revamping and updating our information, changing to our new email addresses, our new website is currently under construction, our social media have been updated and most importantly we're on the process of changing our stationery. We are gradually developing our marketing and media campaign with advice and will keep you as informed as we progress.

Our Twitter hashtags are: #alldeaf #notequalyet

We, both Board members and staff at deafscotland are very excited about the change. Watch this space for further developments / news.

Conference 2019

We are starting to plan our 2019 conference. It will be in Glasgow and called "communication4all".

Further details will follow. Please let us know as soon as possible, if you are interested in sponsoring a part of the event or presenting a workshop: admin@deafscotland.org

Mental Health and Wellbeing for all people affected by deafness: Past, Present and Future deafscotland (formerly Scottish Council on Deafness) started to campaign for inclusive mental health services for people with a hearing loss in Scotland in 1927, the year the organisation was set up. Today it continues to campaign for mental health and wellbeing services and information to be fully inclusive for everyone, including people across the four pillars of deafness – Deaf / Deaf Sign Language users; Deafblind; Deafened and Hard of Hearing.

It is 10 years since deafscotland published the research paper "Making the Case for Specialist Mental Health Services in Scotland". The current paper shows the developments that have been put in place for people with a hearing loss in Scotland who need support to maintain good mental health and wellbeing. It also shows what still needs to be done. To read the paper, go to www.scod.org.uk/briefings/.

Thank you to our volunteers! 😊 deafscotland would like to say BIG THANK YOU to our volunteers over the past 12 months. Our valuable Board members are volunteers and do not get paid. Many individuals who have voluntarily supported us at our events during the past 12 months, particularly our annual conference in March 2018 and of course training. You know who you are – we haven't forgotten about you! It's Volunteers' Week in Scotland during Friday 1 – Thursday 7 June 2018.

Deafblind Awareness Week

Do you have any plans or events happening during Deafblind Awareness Week from Monday 25 June to Sunday 1 July 2018?

Please let us know what you plan for Deafblind Awareness Week and beyond. It helps us to keep the calendar on the website up to date and help avoid clashes of activity, and also promoting awareness.

deafscotland Membership

We have started to engage with our members for 2018/19 and invoices are out. Please continue to work with us together.

We have two categories of membership:

- FULL MEMBERS. These are the organisations that have a major interest in deaf issues, make up the National Council, have voting rights and can put forward nominations to the deafscotland Board.
- ASSOCIATE MEMBERS
Organisations. These are organisations who are interested in deaf issues but it is not their main work, cannot have voting rights, be full members or do not want the responsibility of full membership.
Individuals. These are individuals, people who are deaf or have an interest in deafness and want to support our work.

We are revising our membership offer and fees this year. Fees are held at the same price this year and have not increased for more than five years. In the future we want to be clearer on the content of the membership offer.

We also want to recruit new members to support our work.

- On BSL language development
- Communication barriers and solutions
- General deaf awareness

GENERAL NEWS

West of Scotland Deaf Children's Society

PLEASE SUPPORT WSDCS!!!

We are delighted to announce that West Scotland Deaf Children's Society has been chosen for the next round of the Co-op Local Community Fund. The funding round began on 12 November 2017 and will run for 11 months until the 27 October 2018.

Every time a Co-op member shops and chooses selected Co-op branded products both the member and the community benefit!

5% for the Co-op member: paid into membership account which can be spent next time you shop; or saved to spend whenever you want.

AND

1% for your community - 1% of what members spend goes to the Co-op Local Community Fund and you can choose where this money goes from a number of local causes. Members will be able to choose and give their 1% as of now until 27 October 2018. The more you shop, the more raised for the charity. We will also receive, along with the other causes in our community, an equal share of the money raised from sales of carrier bags.

Pudsey boost for sensory charity

A pioneering North-east charity has secured significant funding from Children in Need to support the delivery of a key project for children and young people with sight and/or hearing loss.

North East Sensory Services (NESS), which has offices in Aberdeen, Dundee and Elgin, was awarded the five-figure grant to fund its Young Persons Sensory Service (YPSS) programme, which works with children and young people from 0-18.

YPSS, which was established in 2010, provides a vital service for young people with a visual or hearing impairment. As well as residential stays, the children are encouraged to learn new life skills, make friends and have fun. The dedicated staff work in smaller, relaxed groups supporting them as they deal with daily obstacles, as well as providing assistance with schools and working towards employability opportunities.

Chief executive of NESS, Graham Findlay, said: “We welcome this latest funding for our young persons project which does crucial work in supporting the youngest members of our community to ensure they achieve their full potential.

“The programme aims to give youngsters access to a range of activities which they may have thought outwith their ability, proving to them that nothing is off limits.

“Above all else, it allows children and young people to meet with others in similar positions and have positive, peer role models. Not only can this make them feel less isolated, it encourages them to develop realistic expectations meaning that they can look forward to a positive and independent future.”

The money, which will be allocated over three years, follows a £15,000 award from Aberdeen City Council. Both grants will be used towards the running costs of activities, residential stays, as well as support for staffing and resources.

Audiology in the community – we need your views!!

The Scottish Government, in collaboration with the Health and Social Care Alliance Scotland (the ALLIANCE) and the Scottish Health Council, has been carrying out some scoping work to gather views and experiences on the delivery of, and access to, community audiology services across Scotland. This work aims to inform the development of the Scottish Government’s policy on the enhancement of community audiology services in Scotland, and how community audiology services are delivered across the country.

As part of the work to identify what may be needed the Scottish Government is seeking views from Service Users, 3rd Sector (voluntary/community based) Organisations and Professionals including NHS Audiology and See Hear Strategy leads in local areas.

To complete this work, the Scottish Government has requested that a focussed collection of information from the 3rd Sector is undertaken that identifies what community audiology services are currently being delivered by 3rd sector Organisations.

We would appreciate 5 – 10 minutes of your time and your agreement to provide us with information about community audiology services your Organisation may be providing, what those services are and where and how they are being delivered.

By completing the questionnaire you are providing The ALLIANCE and The Scottish Government with permission to share this information which may be in a public setting.

To start the questionnaire, please follow this link:

Scottish Government Consultation - Increasing Employment of Disabled People in the Public Sector - Closing 15th August 2018 - Apologies in advance for any cross posting

With apologies for any cross posting and duplications of emails, on the 30th April the Scottish Government launched its consultation on increasing the Employment of Disabled People in the Public Sector:

<https://consult.gov.scot/fair-work-employability-and-skills/disability-employment>

This was a commitment made in A Fairer Scotland for Disabled People, and the consultation sets out on-going commitment to support disabled people into sustainable and fair work, as well as to stay in work if their disability or health issues become worse. It focusses specifically on what more can be done to support more disabled people into work in the public sector. But it will also touch on related issues, such as improvement to data collections of staff information, recruitment processes, and support while in work.

The consultation is open from 30th April – 15th August 2018 and is aimed at public sector bodies, Disabled People's Organisations and disabled people. The Scottish Government will also arrange consultation events around Scotland, and we invite organisations to hold their own events to pull together responses from people they support or represent. Information about this is set out in the consultation document.

NESS – Hundreds of cyclists expected for Moray cycling bonanza event

Hundreds of bike enthusiasts are set to descend upon the idyllic countryside of Moray next week, with a leading north-east charity urging people to get in gear for a day of cycling.

The annual event will take place on Sunday 24 June 2018, to help raise vital funds for North East Sensory Services.

The Glen Moray Bike Ride, includes three cycling options for all ages and abilities, with the choice of a 10-mile family friendly route, a 25-mile route and 75-mile sportive. The event organised by NESS is in its 19th year and will be sponsored for the sixth time by Elgin's Glen Moray Distillery and supported by Moray Council.

NESS, which has offices in Elgin, Aberdeen and Dundee, supports over 6,000 people in the north-east who have sight or hearing loss. The charity helps those with a sensory impairment to overcome the practical and emotional effects of serious sign and/or hearing loss, as well as guiding them to achieve more independence.

Neil Skene, fundraising coordinator for NESS said: "We are encouraging others to take to the saddle and get involved in the local cycling event, which promises a day of fun for all the family. Last year, over 200 cyclists took part in the bike ride, raising over £6,000 for NESS. This event is one of the biggest in our fundraising calendar and helps to raise vital funds for people of all ages across Moray."

The cycles will commence and finish at the Glen Moray Distillery, mainly following minor routes and cycle paths. This year the event organisers will introduce a chip timing system, ensuring the competitive cyclists receive an accurate finish time.

The event is a fantastic opportunity for all levels of cyclists to take part with varying distances of rides. Families can have an enjoyable day out, while being active and viewing the beautiful scenery on the way.

Registration to the event is open until 12pm on 22 June on line at www.g-buster.co.uk. Entries will be taken on the day at the event however there will be a £5 administration fee above the entry fee.

For further information please contact Neil Skene at NESS on 0345 27 12345 or email: fundraising@nesensoryservices.org

UK Government Scottish Affairs Committee

The future of working practices in Scotland Inquiry

www.parliament.uk

Technological developments, new business models and changes in consumer behaviour are bringing about huge changes to the ways in which people work, and their relationships with their employers. Many businesses now meet their labour needs in different ways—such as through flexible contracts and digital platforms which rely on self-employed workers. This has created new opportunities in Scotland and across the UK, but there are concerns that it has also led to an increase in low paid and insecure employment and has shifted the relationship between many businesses and their labour force.

In recognition of the challenges arising from changes to business models and the ways in which people work, the Government commissioned Matthew Taylor, Chief Executive of the Royal Society of Arts, to consider how employment practices needed to adapt to keep pace with modern business models. Following publication of the Taylor review's report, Good work: the Taylor review of modern working practices, the Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy and Work and Pensions Committees considered its findings and produced a joint Report, A framework for modern employment, which looked in detail at the issues considered, and recommendations put forward, by the review. The Government has since published its own response to the Taylor review, which committed to implementing several of Matthew Taylor's recommendations, and launched consultations looking at how other recommendations could most effectively be taken forward.

This Report seeks to build on that work, and examines the particular needs of Scotland and how the devolution settlement affects the way in which the UK and Scottish Governments respond to these challenges; recognising that—while employment law is reserved to the UK Government—both the UK and Scottish Governments have powers which affect the availability and quality of employment opportunities in Scotland, as shown below.

Universal Credit: Disabled People

903738 Thelma Walker (Colne Valley) (Lab):

What assessment she has made of the effect of the roll-out of universal credit on the number of disabled people living in poverty.

The Minister for Disabled People, Health and Work (Sarah Newton):

I do not want to see anyone living in poverty, and no Conservative Member of Parliament wants people living in poverty. Disabled people are some of the biggest beneficiaries of universal credit, with around 1 million disabled households having on average around £110 a month more on universal credit than they would have had on the legacy benefits.

Thelma Walker:

As disability charity Leonard Cheshire has pointed out, many disabled people do not have internet access, assistive technology or the necessary support to fill in the online form to apply for universal credit. Does the Minister agree that the application process needs to be more accessible, so that disabled people can easily apply for these benefits?

Sarah Newton:

The Hon. Lady raises a very important point about accessibility of the benefits system for everyone, which is something we all take very seriously. I am grateful for the support that the Leonard Cheshire foundation and a whole range of stakeholders give us in designing the process, to make sure that it is as accessible as possible.

Mr Simon Clarke (Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland) (Con):

Does the Minister agree that it is important that we are absolutely scrupulous in our presentation of the facts about universal credit? As the Secretary of State referred to earlier, I wrote to the UK Statistics Authority to query the shadow Secretary of State's claim that "40,000 children will wake up in poverty on Christmas Day because the Tories refuse to pause" the roll-out of universal credit. On Friday, Sir David Norgrove told me: "It is clearly important that statements by a political party should be fully supported by the statistics and sources on which they rely. We do not believe".
